Letter from I Rumball to miss

Dear girl

I now embrace this opportunity to right you a few lines & to infor you that I am greatly obliged to you for the few hours which I have spent in your company since my short acquaintance with you since the time I first saw you I was much smitten with your pleasant appearance & observed something in your countenance that appears lovely in my sight you have won my heart and stolen it and given it all happiness is gone I wonte not now upbraid you nor cause you one moments pain I dare confess that and you I hope for you again dear girl since my last evening visit with you I have learnt something about your affair which I little dreamt of it has caused very disagreeable feelings my heart bleeds with with the wounds I sincerely thought I had gained your heart affection & think I had reason to think so it is hard but fair that those which have their hearts entangled with one that they dearly love not to be united as one but as circumstances will not admit how can it help it if I could it should be be helped dear girl I beg you will forgive me for intruding as I thought that circumstances was intirely different from what they now are I think I told you sunday evening I hoped I was not intruding but you made me no answer as I recollect I wish I could express the feelings I have towards you but dear girl respect me as your friend and sincere well wisher I hope you will enjoy the comforts of life which I am doomed to despair to be broken under the fist of man I have no more to say at present from your well wisher and friend since

Please to burn this as soon as you peep

I beg you will not show this to any one grant my wishes J Kimball

In London fair citty it is known very well
A wealthy ship carpenter dwelt She being so beautiful charming and fair
There was none in the city with her could compair

Both lords dukes and nobles and rich squairs of fame both noble and simple a courting her came For to gain this maids favour they tryed their best skill But not one could obtain her love and good will

Till at length a young sailor a courting her came To gain this maids favour he bore a great name
For to gain this maids favour he tryed his best skill Till at length he obtained her love and good will

He says my dear jewel I sorry it is so
A long voyage to the indies I must go
And when I return unto you my dear
We we will get married and live in great splendor dont fear

Now two years being over and gone
A handsome young tailor a courting her came
For to gain this maids favour he tryed his best skill
Till at length he obtained her love and good will

As jack was walking one night through the streets
One of his old shipmates hove a board to meet
You are welcome home shipmate you are welcome home
In time and good season methinks you have come

Yes dont you remember you courted a maid Who she has agreed with a tailor to wed
And to morrow church meeting it's married they be
And I am invited the wedding to see

Jack went to his Captain got licence that night
And went to the church long before it was light And when he had been waiting it there a while He saw them a coming which caused him to smile

Now Jack being dress't in his tarpolin clothes
He in to the church after them he goes Took his true love by the hand while the tailor did What means you what means you you tarpolin brave

It was your long absence I thought you was dead
That made me agree with this tailor to wed
But to end all dispute this damsel replied
The Tailor is my true love and I will be his bride

Come all you young Landsmen
Where ever you be a warning I pray you will take by me Make sure of your true love any time when you may Or the tarpolin Jack will steal them away

Come all you pretty fair maids that sports on Kupits plain I'll tell you of a fair maid that was sporting with his chain

It was with her intended love where she did sport and play till a pressgang over took them and prest her love away

She rung her hands in sorrow and then she tore her hair saying I am undone forever for the loosing of my dear

I wish the french might kill that man that pressed my love away and leave his body a sinking forever in some sea

She dressed herself like a noble duke with a starplate on her breast and swore the Captain she would kill if he did her molest

She went down to the raging sea before the ship had sailed away and then she hailed the Captain and bolaly bid him stay

The officers stood with hats in hand this noble duke to see all thinking she was coming on board their commander for to be

But when she saw her own true love

she took hold of his hand saying this is my servant man and him she do demand for he has robed me of all my gold that I had laid in store now I will venter life and fortune that I try him for it over this young man pled for liberty to cross the raging main saying I never robed a man my lord no my lord in all my days

so when she had him fettered

But when she had him safe on shore she set him in the shade and then began to ask him if he knew such a maid

the tears they flowed from his eyes all hearing the sweet name my dear says she dont trouble be for surely I am the same then with ever lasting imbraces he fell into her arms imbracing all the comforts was renewing to her charms

Come all you forty fair maids

My Dear says she how could you venter your sweet life so to a church he took her and soon made her his wife

If the first or left hand arc is greater than the right hand arc subtract the right hand arc from it and the difference must be subtracted from the corrected Distance

But if the right hand arc is the greater ... subtract the left hand arc from it and the Difference is to be added to the corrected Distance

If the corrected Distance is more than 90 the two arcs must be added together and their sum is to be subtracted from the Corrected Distance

You will then have the True Distance with which you work by Bowditch to find the Longitude you must Straight yes

You must be joking

this is most probable Mr. me.

A Letter From J Kimball to miss Maryann Rogers

Dear girl I now embrace this opportunity to wright you a few lines to inform you that I am greatly obliged to you for the pleasant hours which I have spent in your company since my short acquaintance with you since the time I first you I was very much smitten with your pleasant appearances I observed something on your countinances that appeared lovely in my sight if you have won my heart and ~~B~~roken it and from it all happiness is gone I would not now upbraid you nor cause you one moment pain I bye could that and you I bye for you again Dear girl since my last evening visit with you I have learnt something about your affair which I little dreamt of it has caused very disagreable feelings my heart bleeds with the wound which I little expected ~~I~~ surely thought I had gained your hearts affection I think I had reason to think so it is hard but surr that those which have their hearts entangled with one that they dearly love not to be united as one but as circumstances will not admit how can I help it if I could it should be helped dear girl I beg you will forgive me for intruding as I thought that circumstances was entirely different from what they now are I think I told you sunday evening I hoped I was not intruding but you made me no answer as I recollect I wish I could express the feelings I have towards you but dear girl respect me as your friend and sincere well wisher I hope you will enjoy the comforts of life which I am doomed to despair to be trodden under the feet of men I have no more to say at present from your well wisher and sincere friend J Kimball

Please to burn this as soon as you read it

grant my wishes &c how affectionate I wonder I did not get out
